Oooooo Numb. 4110.

The Daily Courant.

Monday, December 27. 1714.

Hamburg, December 18.

'WE hear from Straelsund, that 'Lodgings are preparing for 'the Marquis d'Croissi, Bro'ther to the Marquis de Torci, 'principal Secretary of State in 'France, who is coming thither Ambassador from 'that Court to the King of Sweden. 'Tis believed 'that Minister will perform the same Office that 'Count Rebenac did in the Swedish Army in Pome'rania in the Years 1677 and 1678, which was to 'take Care that the Subsidies from France be em'ployed in the Purposes they are designed for. Count 'Flemming arrived at Dresden the 16th of last 'Month, and is to come to Straelsund forthwith. 'They write from Brunswick, that the Baggage of 'Count Schonborn is actually set out for Cologn, and 'that himself will follow very speedily to introduce 'that Elector. Collonel Meyer is expected very 'soon at Berlin, being already set out from Copen'hagen, to relieve M. de Westphalen Envoy ex'traordinary of his Danish Majesty at that Court; 'where some Days ago arrived M. Eusander, who 'was formerly in the Service of Prussia, but 'is now charged with some particular Commissions 'from the King of Sweden to the King of Prussia.

London, December 27.

On Friday arrived two Mails from France.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Dec. 29.

Rome, Dec. 4. This Day the Ambassador of Venice had Audience of his Holyness, and gave him an Account of the News received concerning the Motions of the Turks, who seem to threaten the Dominions of the Republick in the Levant, having already committed Hostilities in the Morea, where they have put to the Sword or carried into Slavery the Inhabitants of some Places subject to the Venetians.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Dec. 29.

Toulon, Dec. 9. The Maltese Ships which carried the Ammunition given by the King to the Grand Master, set sail the 2d of this Month, and the same Day at two in the Afternoon they discovered two Algerine Corsairs who were giving Chace to some English Merchant-Ships; the Maltese made up with crowded Sail to joyn them, but the Corsairs fled with more Expedition, and escaped: But we since hear that they were met with upon the Coast of Genoa by an English Man of War of 64 Guns and 160 Men, who attacked and sunk one of them, but the Men however found Means to save themselves upon the other, and fled. Two Days ago a Tartan from Naples was cast away upon our Coast by bad Weather, but all the Men except five were saved.

Paris, Dec. 26. They write from Vienna of the 8th Instant, that a Courier dispatched from Straelsund by the King of Sweden is arrived there with a Letter from that Prince, whereby he notifies his Arrival in Pomerania, which they were the more surprized at because they believed him to be still at the Head of his Troops who are arrived at Buda, and continue their Way by easy Marches, and are furnished with Provisions upon the Road by the Emperour's Commissaries. But we now understand that he passed through this City in Post, and tarried but one Quarter of an Hour at his Envoy's, who himself did not know the King, but took him to be one of Collonel During's Attendants. His Imperial Majesty held a secret Council the 7th upon an Express arrived from the Court of France, who was sent back again the next Morning. The last Orders are sent to the Imperial Troops that are in Bavaria to march from thence, and 14 Regiments of them will be sent to the Netherlands. The Elector Palatine continues his Instances for an Equivalent for the Upper Palatinate which he is to restore to the Elector of Bavaria, and the Court of Vienna labour to reconcile him to it. 'Tis advised from Thionville the 18th, that the Elector of Bavaria's Equipage which went from Compeigne the 4th is embarked upon the River, and his Troops are all passed by Triers. 'Tis said his Electoral Highness will not arrive in his own Dominions before the Month of February, and Madam the Electress his Spouse will go to Munich at the same time, having already sent forward part of her Equipage. We hear from Antwerp of the 20th, that although the Courier whom Count Coningseck sent to Vienna be not returned, that Minister does however hold Conferences upon the Barrier, which is said to be so far advanced that the return of that Courier is only wanting to conclude it; but in the mean time they continue to say that the States-General will not have any Places in the Netherlands given to them in Propriety. 'Tis said Cardinal del Giudice is gone for Rome, having first sent to the King of Spain his surrender of the Offices of Prime Minister and Grand Inquisitor. The Duke de Noailles will not go Ambassador to England as was said, the Marquis d'Alegre being appointed for that Service, whose Equipage is preparing, and he intends to set out about the end of February. The great Reform of the Army is put off till Spring, and when it is made the King will have 30 Battallions and 40 Squadrons less than he had in the last Peace.

Paris, Dec. 29. Letters from Perpignan of the 18th say, that by Advices from Barcelona they are informed that a great Quantity of Ammunition and Provisions is laid up there, with many Bales of Wooll, Instruments for breaking Ground &c, and that a great Number of Transport-Ships and flat-bottom'd Barks proper to make a Descent are collecting together, and all other Preparations are making for the Attack of Majorca, which will be begun the 15th of February. From Straelsund of the 15th Instant it is advised, that the King of Sweden holds Councils of War daily with the Generals Ducker and Welling: What passes in them is unknown, but we understand he meditates some Expeditions, and has given Orders for a Train of Artillery to be got ready, for which many Horses are bought up, and he has made a Treaty with the Duke of Mecklemberg for furnishing his Swedish Majesty 8000 Men, so that it appears he has more Inclination to continue a War than to make Peace. He was determined to embark with the first fair Wind for Stockholm, but has now changed his Mind, and 'tis unknown when he will go thither.

The Elector of Cologn is returned from Court to this City, but 'tis not yet known when he will depart for his own Territories.

From the Paris Gazette.
